

GINA CAPPO PACK

Gina Cappo Pack serves as the Vice President of Manifold Productions, Inc., an independent documentary film company, founded in 1977 by Michael Pack.

Mrs. Pack's background is in development and film promotion, corporate management, marketing, and personnel. Her early skills and experience as a corporate executive have lent direction to Manifold Productions, while helping to maintain an efficient use of resources. She has contributed to a variety of Manifold film projects since 1987, through fundraising, promotion, management, and as an executive producer.

Most recently, Mrs. Pack presided over Manifold Productions while her husband and business partner took leave to head the Claremont Institute. Previously, Mrs. Pack worked in operations planning and new product development before she left corporate management at Pandick Technologies, Inc., a subsidiary of a financial printing firm in 1987. Along with assisting the expansion of offices in twelve cities, she worked closely with regional sales and operations, while reporting to the president. Prior to this, Mrs. Pack consulted for a variety of expanding businesses, both for-profit and not-for-profit. While finishing college, Mrs. Pack managed a division of TemPositions, Inc., a New York temporary help firm, where she was initially responsible for personnel interviewing and placement; later assisting the sales force, coordinating training, and managing departmental operations.

Mrs. Pack is a graduate of Hunter College of the City University of New York. She is married to Michael Pack; they have three sons and reside in Chevy Chase, Maryland.
